Piscataqua Landscaping Cleans Up Storm Damaged Park

Piscataqua Landscaping Company has volunteered its crew and equipment to restore the John Paul Jones Park in Kittery to a better condition it was in before last week's wild winds damaged trees and bushes. The company is sending a crew to the park on Wednesday, March 10th to remove and repair the damage done. They will finish the volunteer beautification project with a complete spring clean up of the park.

According to Justin Gamester, ' This is a pretty little park that serves as the gateway to Kittery from downtown Portsmouth. A lot of us here drive by it often as we live and work in the area. We wanted to help bring it back to its original condition so we called the State to offer our help.'

The park is owned by the State of Maine who is grateful for the assistance after the storm that wreaked so much havoc to the area and because budgets are tight for state-owned property maintenance like this.
